Make Plans Now to Attend the Annual IAC Potluck Picnic

on

August 4

Details and Map Will be in the August Bulletin

President Speaks

Presidents Message: I hope your Memorial Day weekend turned out well in spite of the weather. We had another successful rafting and camping trip at Spring Creek on the Salmon River, 55-60 people were at the Saturday potluck and the rains held off till after dinner both nights. There was one raft trip Sat (brave souls), two on Sunday and at least one on Monday.

I suspect all rafters know the IAC has rafts and other gear that can be rented. However, remember the coordinators have jobs, families and lives outside of coordinating, so be considerate and call a couple days ahead if you need something for a trip. If you call Friday night for a Saturday trip you may be out of luck!

Remember the annual picnic is Aug 4 at Sealander Park. This is a private park west and south of Idaho Falls. Directions will be in the August bulletin. See you there. Garney

Backpacking Schedule

August 20 - 29 - Big Horn Crags Part 2: Reflection Lake, Turquoise Lake, Buck and Doe Lakes are all in a part of the Crags we haven't been into before. Ask for the time off at work now so you can come explore with us. The trail has been recently redone so it gently contours into that section of the Crags. Contact Mark or Donna Whitham for more information and to sign up at 520.1728 or Backpack@idahoalpineclub.org.

Dayhike Schedule

August 13 - 14 - Mount Borah: See Climbing / Mountaineering schedule for details. Contact the Whithams for more information and to sign up at 520.1728 or dayhike@idahoalpineclub.org.

Rafting Schedule

Other Alpine Canyon trips will be scheduled, but group will be held to less than the number required for a permit. Call around to see who might be going.

July 21-25, South Fork Boise river (class III-IV). Camp near Danskin bridge. Contact Jim Lee, 524-5836

Aug 14, Henry's Fork (class III), Riverside campground to Hatchery Ford, Contact Jim Lee, 524-5836.

Climbing / Mountaineering Schedule

August 13 - 14 - Mount Borah: The plan is to car camp at the trail head on Friday night, (maybe we will get lucky and see another display of northern lights), arise EARLY on the 14th to hike up while it is cooler and be on our way down before afternoon electrical storms. This is a steep, strenuous, mostly class 3 hike with one short, section of class 4 scrambling. The elevation gain is about 5400 feet with a little over 2000 feet in the first of the 3.5 miles to the summit. Contact the Whithams for more information and to sign up at 520.1728 or dayhike@idahoalpineclub.org.

Bicycling Schedule

Note: If anyone has any rides that they would like to do that are not listed, or any other information of interest, please contact the Idaho Alpine Club bicycling coordinators, Jeff Coward, at 522-8135 (home) or 529-0775 (work) or jdc1100@srv.net or Michelle Benson at 525-3228. Both can be contacted at bicycling@idahoalpineclub.org Your ideas and input are always welcome.

Seal Coating: The road from Madison Junction to Old Faithful in Yellowstone Park is going to be seal-coated from July 12-23. If anyone visits Yellowstone park after July 23 and before October, please report to Jeff or Michelle on the road conditions (as viewed by bicyclists) so we know what to expect for the October Old Faithful ride.

July ??-?? (dates not yet set - make your preferences known to Jeff Coward) Route of the

Hiawatha rail trail (Taft Tunnel), Trail of the Couer d'Alenes,

This ride is sponsored by the Idaho Alpine Club. The ride starts near the Taft Exit 5 on I-90 near the Idaho - western Montana border. It is suitable for riders of all ages, since the outbound leg is all downhill and there is a shuttle back to the top for those who don't want to ride back up the 2% grade.

The first thing you do is ride through the 8,700 foot long St. Paul Pass (or Taft) tunnel. Lights are required for this ride, as are trail passes. The passes are $8 for adults, $4 for children ages 3 to 13, with children under age 3 free. The shuttle cost is $9 for adults and $6 for children ages 3-13. We will also ride at least part of the new Trail of the Couer d'Alenes - a 76 mile long paved trail on the old Union Pacific rail line through the Silver Valley and along Lake Couer d'Alene. The web sites below have maps and photos of these trails.

Weekday Bicycling

Of perhaps interest to some of the club membership -- retirees, shift workers, and housewives or house husbands, or worker bees wanting to take a morning off -- is this year's continuation of the Tuesday morning rides. These are not Alpine Club sponsored rides but many of the participants are members. If you're not on the Sunday morning the chill in the air made us wish to burrow till the coffee was brewed, but the coffee was up a tree. Cloudy skies & a cold wind greeted us. We were glad to have too many clothes with us. Garney & Paul decided the best option was to go find a hot spring after breakfast. They packed and said farewell. We packed our rain gear with

and Centennial Trail, Couer d'Alene to Spokane

"bike2004" e-list and would like to be, let me know (barbbrown212@msn.com).

Trip Reports

July 2- 5 4th of July Backpack Trip: Chamberlain Basin, located in the White Cloud mountains, is accessible from several trail heads. After checking access beta with Ranger Alex at the SNRA we chose the 4th of July Creek trail head as the starting point of the IAC 2004 4th of July backpack. It is about 10 miles uphill on a well maintained gravel road from highway 75 to the 4th of July trail head.

Leaving Idaho Falls on Friday afternoon, the skies were dark & ominous looking. It was windy & it rained hard as we drove the towards the White Clouds. By the time we got to Arco the clouds were behind us. Garney Hardy & Paul Worth arrived at the trail head about 1/2 hour ahead of us. They had left town a bit earlier in order to stop for dinner at the Sun Valley brewery. Heyburn & Tyler estatically greeted them while we setup the princessmobile for the nite.

In the morning the puppies made sure we woke up before the alarm went off. After breakfasting on breakfast burritos or sandwiches, OJ, and hot go juice, we began preparing to go backpacking. At that point Paul made a trail head discovery...his boots were in Idaho Falls. Dashing all of Heyburn's hopes of getting out of the hike, Mark saved the day and loaned Paul some sneakers.

The canyon beyond the trail head parking is lined with jagged peaks still wearing patches of their winter coat. The trail climbs gently up the canyon passing 4th of July lake just after 2.2 miles. Washington lake, where we set up camp, is another .8 mile beyond. Total elevation gained is 860 feet. We camped on a rocky knoll overlooking Washington lake and a meadow filled with Marsh Merrigolds, Buttercups, Paintbrush, Shooting Stars, and Spring Beauty. Shortly after setting up camp it began raining. It continued to rain off & on all afternoon. The rain stopped long enough to cook dinner and attempt to identify what kind of duck was paddling about the lake. Shortly, we heard thunder, then peanut sized hail pelted us as we ran for the tents.

our lunch and set off for Chamberlain Basin. It never did get very warm all day but it didn't rain either. The cool temperatures made the 14 mile round trip into Chamberlain Basin quite pleasant. Occasional patches of snow along the trail provided fun breaks for Heyburn and Tyler. The trail drops down Washington Creek before crossing it to climb up to a junction with Germainia Creek trail. From the Junction the trail switchbacks up to a high ridge with an incredible panoramic view of Castle Peak, Castle Divide, Chamberlain Basin, Wickiup Creek, and even as far as the Lost River range on the north east horizon. Dropping the last 2 miles into the basin, we encountered a few other hikers and horse back riders. We stopped for lunch next to the largest of the lakes in the basin and let Tyler swim a bit before we hiked up a little canyon tucked between the two largest lakes. Boggy little meadows were filled with a dazzling array of flowers. Elk prints in the soft mud of the trail. A meandering creek narrowed from the lake above to gush down the little canyon, all overlooked by the jagged spires of Serrette Ridge and Castle Peak. All of this would have been lost (4th Cont.) nearly 30 years ago had a coalition of motorized and nonmotorized interests not banded together to keep this beautiful area from being mined. Hopefully, current legislation will be passed to protect the White Clouds forever.

After thoroughly enjoying the basin, we began the climb back to the ridge stopping to take a panoramic series of photos to enjoy on a winters day. Back at the camp site we discovered another party had arrived to camp at Washington Lake. Considering the holiday weekend and the easy access, it was surprising to only see one other party, besides ours, spending the night.

Monday morning dawned under clear skies and much warmer temperatures. Playing in the lake with the puppies followed a leisurely breakfast. Then with visions of a yummy Thai supper in Hailey, we packed our gear, and headed back to the trail head.

Note: The club does have two transceivers which are the old signal and will not be sent out per a council decision in 2000 when the old signal transceivers had been discontinued for several years. They have been for sale as a pair for best offer since then. They are only of value as collector items or for someone with the old signal or the old dual signal receivers. Be aware that rescue can not be expected with these units. The local SAR teams have long since replaced their units with the current standard signal. If anyone is interested in buying the pair contact the Whithams xcski@idahoalpineclub.org with an offer.
